Baselworld 2018: A successful edition

One of the world's important show for watches, jewelry and gemstones, Baselworld, closed the door of the 2018 edition on 27 March. At the closing press conference, Baselworld's Managing Director Sylvie Ritter summarized that this year's edition proved to be successful. An overwhelming majority of the exhibitors reported very satisfactory business results. Although this ear's show had been two days shorter than previous editions, the overall number of visitors remained unchanged. The new format, fewer exhibitors and shorted duration, was positively received.

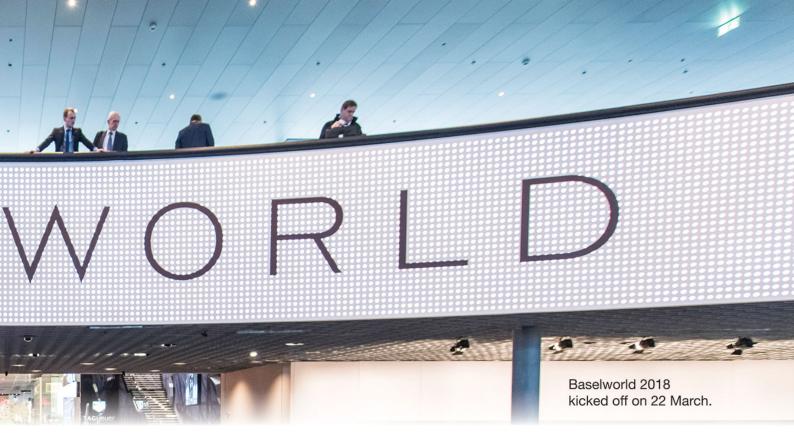

Numerous exhibitors likewise expressed strong satisfaction with the start of Baselworld and confirm first positive results. For example, Karl-Friedrich Scheufele, Co-president of Chopard, says that "the 2008 show started very positively, we were able to welcome many partners from all over the world and have received a very keen interest in our new products. With more than 300 international journalists, our press conference about "Sustainability", which took place on Thursday (22 March), was a complete success. The great response demonstrates once again that Baselworld is and remains an indispensable platform for exchange for the watch and jewellery industry."

The 6 days exhibition started following the ribbon cut in the opening ceremony.

World leading brands of jewelry, watch and gemstone took part in the exhibition.

Compared to last year, 8% increase in the number of professional visitors was reported to attend the show. Leading exhibitors were likewise very satisfied wit this year's show. Rolex's CEO Jean-Frederic Dufour said: "We are very happy with this year's edition of Baselworld. Our new products extremely well received by our clients and the press. This annual event remains a 'must' for the Swiss watch industry, its evolution and its dynamism, which was proven by the strong participation and the avid enthusiasm. We are looking forward to Baselworld 2019!"

All leading brands will exhibit at Baselworld 2019. Definitive commitments have been received from Rolex, Swatch Group, Patek Philippe, and LVMH etc. For the next edition, the show will also work on new developments. The management will works closely wit exhibitors to define new formats for the various sectors. These new formats will offer medium-sized businesses a presence at Baselworld in line with their needs.

Reference Baselworld 2018 press release "Baselworld welcomes 8% more visitors on the first two days" (March 24, 2018) "Baselworld 2018: A successful edition" (March 28, 2018)

Though the duration of the show was shortening, this year the number of visitor remain unchanged.

The increasing number of professional visitors of the show is observed.

Hong Kong International Jewellery Show 2018

The 35th edition of Hong Kong International Jewellery Show, organized by Hong Kong Trade Development Council (HKTDC), was successfully held on 1-5 March 2018, at the Hong Kong Convention and Exhibition Centre. The Show welcomed about 2,500 exhibitors from 41 countries and regions and more than 50,000 buyers in the exhibition space of over 78,000 square meters. Among international buyers, visitors from the mainland China, the Philippines, Vietnam, Malaysia, India and the UK registered remarkable growth.

The Jewellery Show featured a number of themed zones. The Hall o Fame displayed over 50 internationally well-known jewellery brand. The Hall of Time featured luxury watches and clocks while World of Glamour highlighted the exhibitors. Other zones include

Antique & Vintage Jewellery
Galleria which spotlighted classic jewellery, Designer Galleria which displayed the latest jewellery designs, the Hall of Jade Jewellery which offered a wide variety of meticulously made jade pieces and the Treasures of Craftsmanship which collected exquisite decorative items with precious stones, semi-precious stones and metals.

An independent onsite survey was conducted during the show, gathering thoughts of over 1,300 buyers and exhibitors on the market prospects, products and industry trends. Most respondents reflected a rather positive view on the market prospects, with over 65% of them expected it to be steady or growing. In terms of the markets, respondents were most optimistic about the China market, followed by North America and Western Europe. As for the product materials, Gold-Karat was expected to be the most popular, followed by Gold-Karat rose (39%) and Gold-Karat yellow (34%).

All in all, the Hong Kong International Jewelllery Show 2018 was a huge success and the next show will be held in March, 2019.

Discover Luxury Jewellery at IJL 2018

From exceptional white and fancy-colour diamonds, to exquisite coloured gemstones and precious metals, the luxury jewellery market is a sparkling example of artistry and imagination. Despite the ongoing challenges of tempting a new generation of customers to buy fine jewellery, high-end retailers continue to excel through well-established and growing relationships with global luxury brands. With the rise and rise of the internet as a veritable shop window and the importance of Instagram as a sales tool, young fine jewellers have an opportunity to showcase their designs to a global network of retail jewellers from thousands of miles away. Despite this, there will always be the need to forge personal connections – made possible only by face-to-face meetings – to build loyalty, trust and comraderie in an industry that is continually shifting and changing with the times.

The global fine jewellery market is a sparkling balance of these established luxury brands and emerging designers, all vying for the attention of the finest high-end retailers. At International Jewellery London (IJL), these three facets of the jewellery industry come together, with suppliers, designer brands and buyers gathered together under one-roof. For more than 60 years, IJL has been introducing the best of British and multi-national suppliers to luxury retailers. Visitors hail from independent boutiques, multi-premise retailers, department stores, ecommerce companies, airlines, luxury hotel groups, television broadcasting businesses, galleries and museums. IJL will take place at Olympia Grand, London, United Kingdom, from September 2-4, 2018.

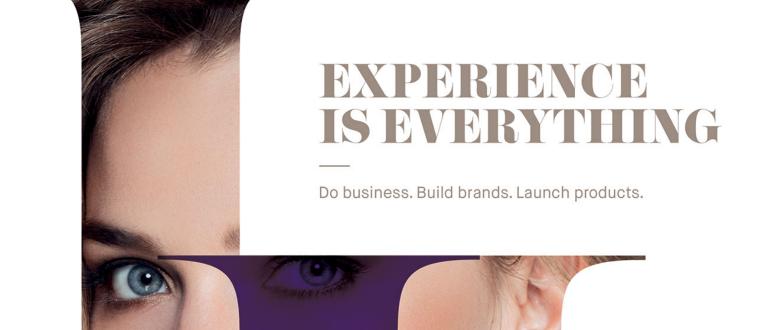

Fashion Jewellery for a Stylish World at IJL 2018

Predicting the next big trend has always been key for fashion jewellery brands. Whether drawing inspiration from the catwalks or speaking to social media influencers, those brands that look ahead are usually the ones with the most successful seasonal ranges. Today's fashion market is packed with high-quality players creating fantastic jewellery from sterling silver, plated-base metals, and more innovative materials, like leather, silk, plastic and even porcelain. The best collections are carefully-considered, balancing commerciality with an emphasis on price, quality, and eye-catching design. What is clear is that today's consumer wants something new, something unique and something that reflects their personality.

Each year, an exciting array of fashion jewellery brands exhibit at International Jewellery London (IJL) to meet retailers, make new connections and get essential feedback on their ranges. With an entire Design Gallery dedicated to established and emerging businesses, IJL is an ideal platform to present newness to a verified trade-only audience and members of the UK and international press. For more than 60 years, our beautifully-presented show floor has offered a range of exhibitor spaces, both small and large, for brands looking to make their mark on the United Kingdom. Plus, our home in London – one of the fashion capitals of the world and a hub for design, innovation and business – ensures visitors travel from far-and-wide to stay ahead of the competition. IJL will take place at Olympia Grand, London, United Kingdom, from September 2-4, 2018.
